

ABSTRACT

There is provided a method of driving an electromagnetic pump where noise and vibration that accompany abrupt fluctuations in pressure inside a pump chamber are reduced.

A pulse voltage is applied alternately on a positive side and a negative side to drive the electromagnetic coil such that a change in voltage that occurs when the polarity of the pulse voltage is inverted has a continuous slope at least between the positive side and the negative side.